“If ever we believed that Aotearoa was protected from crises in foreign countries, the economic recession over the past few months has dispelled all notions of immunity. Our health is not only subject to follies of our own making, but also to new forces that reach us from distant shores. Global warming, global inequalities in standards of health and education, global colonisation that challenges our Kiwi ways of living, and now the global recession, threaten to leave their marks on families, whanau and communities. While we must act to avoid the worst consequences of those forces we should also take steps to turn around those aspects of globalisation that are incompatible with our health and the health of others across the globe. “Hauora – everyone’s right 2009” provides a unique opportunity to formulate an agenda for health that will be relevant to us, to the world, and to future generations.”

Keynote Speaker Profiles

Professor Philipa Howden-Chapman

Professor Philippa Howden-Chapman is well known in New Zealand and internationally for her research on how improving housing improves health. She is a social scientist and Acting Head of the Department of Public Health, University of Otago, Wellington.

Her work in health promotion and public health was recognised by the Public Health Association when she was named the Public Health Champion of 2006. She has also been awarded the HRC Liley Prize, the Royal Society Joan Metge Prize and the Queen’s Service Order.

Professor Howden-Chapman has contributed to the work of the WHO Commission on Social Determinants of Health, the National Heart Foundation of New Zealand and the New Zealand Drug Foundation and many other organisations. She is the director of two research groups, He Kainga Oranga/Housing and Health Research Programme and the New Zealand Centre for Sustainable Cities.

Professor Mason Durie

Professor Mason Durie (Rangitane, Ngati Kauwhata, Ngati Raukawa) is world renown for his work to improve the health of Maori and indigenous peoples. He has a life time involvement in Maori, community, family, education and health issues.

Professor Durie is Deputy Vice-Chancellor (Maori and Pasifika) at Massey University, and has previously been a Families Commissioner and a psychiatrist. His contribution to public health was recognised by the Public Health Association when he was named the Public Health Champion 2003, and his contribution to indigenous mental health was recognised last year when he was awarded the Royal Australian and New Zealand College of Psychiatrists Mark Sheldon Prize. He is a Companion of the New Zealand Order of Merit and a Fellow of the Royal Society of New Zealand.

He developed Te Pae Mahutonga, an indigenous model of health promotion which he first presented at a Health Promotion Forum Conference ten years ago.
